BEFORE BREAKFAST. Scrantonians who want to lay away a few dollars each month until $50 and then attend the great exposition to be held in Paris for the comparatively insignificant sum of $25 will have the privilege of grasping such an opportunity. There is now in this city a representative of a well secured touring company who is soliciting subscribers for such a scheme. It is difficult to understand how the company can for so small a sum as $25 guarantee so much, but it furnishes ample security to fill all its obligations. The plan is that a subscriber at one time pays not less than $5 per month or more than one-third of his total subscription. If the monthly payments do not complete the subscription a short time before the proposed date of sailing, the balance is to be paid in a lump. The company will allow 4 per cent. interest on every payment. This is offered in order to overcome the argument that a prospective tourist could better afford to begin depositing his money in a savings bank. Subscribers will be allowed to transfer their payments or to withdraw their total subscriptions at any time, the latter option being at a reduction of 75 per cent. In case of death the subscriptions and interest will be paid to the subscribers' heirs. Six months' notice of the desired date of sailing must be given the company. Ocean transportation will be furnished on any of several Atlantic express lines. The itinerary of the trip includes first-class ocean passage, several days of sight-seeing in and about London, two weeks in Paris and excursions in the latter city. Subscribers will be quartered at London and Paris in what are termed "second-class" hotels but which are about equal to our own Hotel Jermyn.

Cal hire, tips, guides, and, in fact, every necessary item of expense will be borne by the company. The company even provides admission to the exposition and the Louvre and other galleries. If the scheme isn't thoroughly American and up-to-date then there are but few such enterprises that can be so considered. It certainly offers an attractive inducement to persons of moderate means to remember that the World's fair history and society place four years ago while the coming record-breaking monster show of Paris is only three years hence. In substance, the plan is one of insurance or assurance of the benefits of European travel under favorable auspices at a low cost and at a time when France will be the terminus for much of the world's travel. Thursday is to be a held day for several well known charities in this city. The Florida is not proposed to be outdone in having an interest in the new home for the Friendless and are to give a chrysanthemum show for its benefit beginning Thursday and continuing until Saturday night. There is probably no class of business people who are more persistently benefited for assistance in charitable work than the florists. The churches and societies of the city are endeavoring to have a remarkable stock of costly decorations to be engaged in demand for the annual dinner and entertainment without money and without price. It is really very kind indeed of these generous friends to take the trouble to give this exhibition, freely for the benefit of the Home for the Friendless and it is to be hoped that everybody will patronize it and thus show their appreciation. The show will be held in the board of trade building and will open Thursday. Doesnt this make you hungry? The annual dinner and supper will be served Thursday of this week at the Young Women's Christian association rooms and will surpass anything in that line yet given by this organization which is paying a great deal. Read the menu: Dinner—Soup, roast beef, turkey, celery, potatoes, squash, cabbage, cranberry sauce, plum pudding, ice cream, cake, coffee, tea. Supper—Cold roast beef, creamed horse radish, chicken salad, potatoes, fruit, ice cream, coffee, tea. "His Grace of Genoa" was published last week by the Scribners. Those who did not like the companion novel "A Lady of Quality" will assuredly not like this book, however much they may have admired the other works from the pen of its gifted author, Bernard Cornwell. It is a lack of cleverness in composition and more cleverness in the way of a plot the book might have been written by Guido of Belfra. As far as the supernatural qualities of the hero are concerned, together with the illimitable amount of money connected with his personal appearance and that of his illustrious family, the entire story in "A Lady of Quality" is repeated in this companion book. Clearly the author is bringing in a new and again, and the only new incidents that the reader had not heard are found in the chapter "My Lord Marquis Plunges into the Thames," which is really a most remarkable incident, and notwithstanding the effort to make it appear delicate, it is very much the reverse, and the time where My Lord Duke discovers that his wife has killed John Oxon, and in which he strikes that she had not committed the murder himself. The language is, of course, fine and forcible, the bits of description are lovely and for the people who like that sort of thing the book is one they will like.

Joseph L. Levy, was yesterday admitted to practice at the Lackawanna county courts on motion of George D. Taylor, his preceptor. Mr. Levy is a graduate of Harvard Law school, and made a brilliant record showing his examination before the local board. He is a bright and aggressive young man, with a host of friends and well wishers in the city and county, and will undoubtedly make his mark in his well-chosen profession. This isn't the end of Thursday's pleasure. The McAll missionary society has arranged a delightful entertainment to take place in the Second Presbyterian church on that evening. Dr. Ledy, a famous traveler and speaker, will give a lecture illustrated by magnificent views of Paris and showing the beauty and progress of the McAll work in France. The tickets are 25 cents.

SAD ACCIDENT AT NICHOLSON

A. J. Saunders, of This City, Badly Injured While Hunting.

SHOT GUN WAS DISCHARGED

Contents of Both Barrels Lodged in His Legs—Right Member So Badly Shattered That It Had to Be Amputated Below the Knee at the Lackawanna Hospital—Had to Be Carried Several Miles Through the Woods.

In the forest four miles from Nicholson, Wyoming county, A. J. Saunders, of this city, had both legs shattered by an accidental double discharge of No. 7 shot from a double barreled gun in the hands of Oscar Relph, of Nicholson. Saunders is a married man and conducts the market at Penn avenue and Spruce street. Relph was walking a few feet in front of Saunders when he slipped and fell the trigger of the gun striking a stone which discharged the weapon.

After the accident Relph and Henry Just, of this city, other member of the party, doubled back and were joined by Relph, who is an experienced hunter, thoroughly familiar with the woods thereabouts. Justin, Relph and Saunders were out after rabbits. The Scranton men reached Nicholson in the early morning and were joined by Relph, who is an experienced hunter, thoroughly familiar with the woods thereabouts.

FIRST RABBIT HUNT. It was Saunders' first rabbit hunting experience and he was meeting with some success. The first rabbit he fired at fell. In all eight rabbits had been killed when the three men reached a sloping, stone-strewn piece of ground, just to be about four miles from Nicholson. Down this incline they started. Relph was in the lead with Saunders trailing him about three feet distant. Justin was off to the right. Relph slipped on a stone and fell to the hard ground. His gun barrel rested in the crook of his left arm and the stock was in his right hand. As he fell the triggers, both of which were at full cock, struck hard against a stone and a double report cracked through the forest. Saunders sank to the ground and in an instant partly arose—"My God!" he cried, "both legs are gone."

He had attempted to stand on the foot which he thought was safe. Justin rushed to his side and saw the wide gaps in Saunders' boots through which flowed blood. The story of that terrible moment and the heroic struggle afterward is given in Justin's own words. "I saw the blood and the flesh on the outside of the boots. The shot had passed clear through. It made me sick but I knew that I must work and work quickly to staunch the flow of blood. With my hunting knife I cut away the leather. The soles of the boots when I took them off were an inch thick with blood and floating pieces of flesh and bone. The sight numbed me. I kept my senses and—God, how I work!—I took my knife and cut away the lining. With this and my handkerchief I bound both legs above the wounds. I used all my strength to tie them tightly so as to hold back the blood.

TERRIBLY EXCITED. "All the time I was working poor Relph was running about as if wild. He would rush up and time and again show the dent in the gun where it struck the rock. 'Look at it!' he would say; 'Look, I couldn't help it; it was an accident, an accident!' Then he showed the dent in the gun again." Relph and Justin carried the wounded man to the farm where the Downey farm. Mrs. Downey heard the calls for help and jumping into a wagon she drove over to where the wounded man lay. He was placed in the conveyance, his two companions supporting him, and taken to the farm house. Saunders was growing weaker every minute and it was decided to get him to Nicholson as soon as possible.

The farmer drove them to the residence of a physician at Nicholson, a distance of about two miles. After examining Saunders' condition the doctor advised that he be taken to the hospital at once. Accordingly a dispatch was sent to the Lackawanna hospital summoning the ambulance to the station in this city when the milk train arrived. While the party was waiting at the Nicholson station a boy brought them the three guns, eight rabbits, coats, hats, etc., which had been abandoned in the woods.

AMPUTATION NECESSARY. Arriving at the hospital it was at once decided that amputation of the right leg a few inches below the knee would be necessary. Dr. P. F. Gunster, assisted by the house physician, Dr. N. A. Newbury, performed the operation at 5:30 o'clock. The wound in the left foot is not dangerous. The shot seemed to have passed through the right leg and out through the left while Saunders was in the act of walking and had the left foot unharmed. Saunders rested comfortably after the operation. He is married and lives with his wife and two children on Linden street. Relph is a middle-aged man and formerly lived in this city where he has relatives. He is a railroad.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW ASSURED. Is to Open Thursday in the Board of Trade Building. Scranton is to have a chrysanthemum show. It will open Thursday under the auspices of the Home for the Friendless and the city's leading florists, and the revenue to be derived will be devoted to the Home organization. It seemed that Scranton was in this season, to be denied one of those splendid floral displays which have been such delights in past years but some of the women of the Home for the Friendless organization, whose energy is proverbial for the purpose, probably by Thursday noon the exhibits will be ready for inspection. It is proposed to

Rev. Rogers Israel and two of his neighbors, H. S. Keller, of 121 Wyoming avenue, and W. Walsh, of 224 Wyoming avenue, together with the crew of Throop-Lynn street car No. 35, had a thrilling ride on Pine street last night. The car ran away coming down the steep incline, jumped the track on the curve at No. 22 school and dashing down the still steeper portion of Pine street between Madison and Jefferson avenues ploughed into the fence surrounding E. G. Cousins' residence.

BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT.

Miss Della Barrett is the Plaintiff and Eugene M. Parrott the Defendant. Her Allegations.

Eugene M. Parrott, of Pine street, was yesterday made defendant in a $5,000 breach of promise suit by Della Barrett, the 17-year-old daughter of James Barrett, a watchman, living at 607 1/2 West Linden street. In the declaration filed by her attorney, Charles L. Hawley, Miss Barrett states that she has been on terms of close friendship with the defendant since July last, when she says he began paying attention to her. On October 29 she was at his home on Pine street and, she alleges, he asked her to become his wife. She agreed and kissing her, he placed a solitaire diamond ring on her finger. The next day he went to see her parents and secured their consent to the marriage, which it was agreed was to take place at once.

For some weeks thereafter, the declaration goes on to say, the defendant was constant in his devotion, but suddenly and without any cause that the plaintiff can explain he avoided her altogether. She sought him out and reminded him of his promise, but it was ineffectual. On Saturday last, after repeatedly entreating him to keep his contract, she made a final demand upon him to keep faith with her and when he again flatly refused she sought out a lawyer and proceeded to institute suit against him.

Her engagement was announced to all their friends, she avers, and his failure to keep his part of it has caused her great humiliation and has injured her in the eyes of the circle in which she moves. Their failure to become married was due to no fault of hers, she alleges, as she was willing and able at any time since their engagement to fulfill their solemn compact. Mr. Parrott is a civil engineer and the possessor of considerable property. He is about 35 years of age, and a widower. During the latter part of last month his relations retained proceedings to have him adjudged an habitual drunkard and to secure a trustee to take charge of his property. The proceedings are still pending.
